Project Seminar

for teachers seeking their MALS degree from Stony Brook University only

The Project Seminar course is a research and writing intensive course in which each student learns the theory and practice of developing and completing a written research paper. The course will provide you with the opportunity to enhance your understanding of a topic that interests you and about which you would like to learn more. The instructor must approve all proposed topics.

This course does not meet weekly and is only open to teachers seeking their MALS degree from Stony Brook. You must have completed 12 graduate credits and be a matriculated student at Stony Brook University in order to take this course.
