

CEM 568

HIV/AIDS

(Formerly called - AIDS: An Educational Medical and Social Challenge)

HIV/AIDS issues will be examined in relation to their effect on our lives. Biomedical, social, psychological, cultural, political, ethical, legal, economic and educational aspects of the epidemic will be explored. Throughout the course, students will have the opportunity to explore and assess how their personal values and attitudes may impact on their delivery of HIV/AIDS education.

Interactive lecture, values clarification exercises, small group interaction, guest speakers, videotapes, role playing and reading assignments will be a part of the experience.
